Report on One day workshop on Value added products

The Department of Botany successfully organized a one-day workshop on value-added products as part of the curriculum 15th September 2025 for S.Y.B.Sc. students enrolled in the Minor Subject. The workshop aimed to provide hands-on experience and practical knowledge about the preparation and significance of botanical value-added products. During the session, participants actively engaged in the preparation of the following items:

Tomato Ketchup, Tomato Sauce, Rose Water and Gulkand. The workshop emphasized the importance of utilizing botanical resources to create commercially viable and health-promoting products. Students learned about the nutritional benefits, preservation techniques, and market potential of these preparations.

The event was well-received by the students, who appreciated the opportunity to apply theoretical concepts in a practical setting. The Department of Botany extends its gratitude to all faculty members and participants for their enthusiastic involvement and support in making the workshop a success.
